DECISION

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

ARTHUR J. AMCHAN, Administrative Law Judge. This case was tried in Greenfield, Massachusetts on February 8-10, 2011. United Steelworkers Local 5518 filed the charges in this case on July 30, 2010. The General Counsel issued the complaint on December 28, 2010.

On the entire record,<sup>1</sup> including my observation of the demeanor of the witnesses, and after considering the briefs filed by the General Counsel and Respondent, I make the following

FINDINGS OF FACT

I. JURISDICTION

Respondent, Kennametal, Inc. is a large international company with 26 facilities in the United States and 48 facilities world wide, including the facility in this case, which is located in Lydonville, Vermont.<sup>2</sup> One of the products produced at Lydonville is taps. A tap is a tool used

Tr. 525, line 18: "minimum" should be "recognized."

<sup>2</sup> This case initially also concerned alleged unfair labor practices at Respondent's Greenfield, Massachusetts facility, but those were resolved.

5 to cut an internal screw thread At the Lydonville plant, Respondent derives gross revenue in excess of $500,000 and sells and ships goods valued in excess of $50,000 to points outside of Vermont. Respondent admits, and I find, that it is an employer engaged in commerce within the meaning of Section 2(2), (6), and (7) of the Act and that the Union, the United Steelworkers of 10 America, Local 5518, is a labor organization within the meaning of Section 2(5) of the Act.

10 II. ALLEGED UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICES

The Union has represented all production and maintenance employees at Respondent's 15 Lydonville, Vermont facility since 1957. Respondent Kennametal acquired this facility in approximately 1997. There have a series of collective bargaining agreements between the owners of this facility and the Union. The agreement governing this case between Kennametal and Local 5518 was in effect from October 1, 2005 through October 2, 2010. Apparently, the parties currently operate under a subsequent agreement, which is not in this record, or are still 20 negotiating a successor agreement.

The primary issue in this case is whether Respondent violated Section 8(a)(5) and (1) of the Act in refusing to bargain about the implementation of its corporate-wide "Management Based Safety Program" (MBS) at the Lydonville facility. Respondent announced 25 implementation of the program on February 2, 2010. The Union requested that Respondent bargain over the implementation of MBS the next day. Respondent declined to so, asserting that it was not a mandatory subject of bargaining.

At the commencement of this hearing, the General Counsel moved to amend the remedy 30 sought for this alleged violation to require rescission of the reprimand and one-day suspension issued to employee Doug Noyes on September 2, 2010 and the suspension and subsequent termination of employee Kenneth Wilkins on January 11, 2011. I granted this amendment midway through the hearing. The amendment pertains to another major issue in this case, the relationship, if any, of MBS to Respondent's Procedure for Corrective Actions for Safety Violations and Work Instructions for Corrective Actions. The General Counsel and Charging 35 Party contend that these instructions, used in disciplining Noyes and Wilkins, are part and parcel of MBS, or at least sufficiently related to MBS to require negotiation with the Union about the implementation of MBS.

Alternatively, the General Counsel contends, as stated in its post-hearing motion to 40 further amend the complaint, that Respondent violated Section 8(a)(5) in implementing the Procedure for Corrective Action in September 2009. The General Counsel may amend the complaint at any point in the proceedings, including upon the filing of his post hearing brief.
Regardless of whether the complaint is amended or not, whether or not consideration of the Procedure for Corrective Action is appropriate depends upon whether it is closely related to 45 matters contained in the complaint and was fully and fairly litigated, Williams Pipeline, 315 NLRB 630 (1994). I find that there is a close relationship between the allegations of the complaint and whether Respondent violated Section 8(a)(5) and (1) in implementing the Procedure for Correct Action. Moreover, I find that the issue was fully and fairly litigated and 50 grant the General Counsel's motion to amend the complaint.

5 Respondent contends there is no relationship between MBS and the Procedure and Work Instructions for Corrective Actions.<sup>3</sup> Nevertheless, G.C. Exh. 42, particularly paragraph 7.4 and in discussing “People Factors” on the second to last page, establishes that counseling or disciplining employees is one of the ways Kennametal intends to improve its safety record through MBS, also see Tr. 572-76.

10 Additionally, MBS cut the Union out of the process of accident investigation, contrary to the provisions of the collective bargaining agreement. By changing this process, Respondent diminished the possibility that factors such as production quotas would be considered in assessing the cause of an accident. Therefore, MBS in making it more probable that an injured 15 employee would be found at fault for an industrial accident had a clear relationship to disciplinary measures taken as the result of an accident. Thus, I reject Respondent’s argument that MBS has nothing to do with Respondent’s discharge and discipline policies.

20 The case also involves three allegations that Respondent violated Section 8(a)(5) in refusing or failing to provide information requested by the Union and one instance in which Respondent allegedly unreasonably delayed providing information.

<sup>3</sup> Respondent contends that consideration of its disciplinary policy regarding safety violations is barred by Section 10(b) of the Act. I reject this contention. The 6-month limitations period prescribed by Section 10(b) begins to run only when a party has clear and unequivocal notice of a violation of the Act. See, e.g., Leach Corp., 312 NLRB 990, 991 (1993), enfd. 54 F.3d 802 (D.C. Cir. 1995). The requisite notice may be actual or constructive. In determining whether a party was on constructive notice, the inquiry is whether that party should have become aware of a violation in the exercise of reasonable diligence. See, e.g., *Moeller Bros.
Body Shop*, 306 NLRB 191, 192–193 (1992). Constructive notice will not be found where a “delay in filing is a consequence of conflicting signals or otherwise ambiguous conduct.” A & L Underground, 302 NLRB 467, 469 (1991). Respondent did not provide the Union clear and unequivocal notice of this policy until January 2011.

Moreover, there is no credible evidence that Respondent implemented the disciplinary policy reflected in its Work Instructions for Corrective Action until July 2010 at the earliest when Eric Huttenlocker assumed day-to-day responsibility for labor relations at the Lydonville facility.
Respondent at trial relied largely on Amy Morissette, its Environmental, Health and Safety lead to establish that this disciplinary policy was in force in 2009. However, this record establishes that Morissette was “out of the loop” with regard to discipline policy, human resource matters and labor relations at all times material to this case. She testified that she understood that a new disciplinary policy was effective immediately after participating in a March 2009 conference call, but offered no explanation as to why nothing relevant to this policy surfaced at the Lydonville plant until June. Nor did Morissette offer any explanation as to why Respondent’s then human resource manager, Ginger Noyes, did not post anything about the disciplinary scheme inherent in the new policy until September. As stated herein, I discredit Morissette’s testimony regarding the September posting.

5     Respondent's Procedure for Corrective Actions for Safety Violations and Work Instructions for Corrective Actions.

Lack of Sufficient Notice to the Union

10           In February 2009, Respondent's global headquarters generated documents entitled "Procedure for Corrective Action for Safety Violations," and "Work Instructions for Corrective Actions" All or part of these documents appear in three different exhibits, G.C. Exh. 16, G.C.
 Exh. 32 and Respondent's Exhibit 21. There are differences in these exhibits, which may go to the heart of this case. This is so because Respondent asserts that the Union had notice of the 15 contents of at least part of these documents by virtue of their being posted on a bulletin board in 2009.

          Sean Jewell, Respondent's day shift supervisor, testified that in the late summer of 2009
 he saw part of G.C. Exh. 32 posted on a bulletin board by the human resources office, Tr. 609-20 10. He testified that only part of the document was posted. He stated, "I don't believe this Appendix A was posted with the first three pages." However, G.C. Exhibit 32, without Appendix A is not a three page document; it is five pages. It is on the 4th and 5th pages of the document that Respondent states that any serious safety violation may be grounds for a three-day suspension and that a second serious violation may be grounds for termination. Respondent's 25 exhibit 21 is likewise a 6-page document on which the paragraphs also appear on pages 4 and 5.

          These statements regarding the imposition of discipline appear on the first page of G.C.
 Exh. 16. Based on the testimony of Jewell, Union President Leon Garfield and Grievance Committee Chairman John Eastman, I find that Respondent did not post those portions of the 30 Work Instructions pertaining to suspension and termination for safety violations and that the Union did not receive any notice of this change in disciplinary policy until January 2011.<sup>4</sup> I would note that not a single witness, including Amy Morissette (Tr. 416-17), testified to seeing a document posted that stated that a serious safety violation would lead to three-day suspension and that a second such violation would result in an employee's termination.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>4</sup> Respondent claims to have applied this policy in September 2009 to employee Robert Gordon when he cut his finger. I do not credit this testimony. Moreover, even if this were so, Respondent never told the Union it was applying the decision tree in the work instructions to Gordon. Indeed, it is in part because Respondent did not inform the Union that it was applying the decision tree to Gordon that I discredit its testimony in this regard.

Morissette's testimony is also inconsistent with the Respondent's issuance of a written warning 2 to Chad Tibbets on February 12, 2010, G.C. Exh. 39. Tibbets' failure to follow proper lockout/tagout procedures is a serious violation pursuant to the Procedure for Corrective Action and should have resulted in a three day suspension pursuant to the work instructions. The failure to suspend Tibbets strongly suggests that Respondent was not applying the new safety discipline policy until September 2010 when it suspended Noyes.

<sup>5</sup> Second shift supervisor Tim Morissette's response to his counsel's question as to whether he had seen all of R- Exh. 21, except for the decision tree, was an equivocal, "I believe I've seen most of it, yes," Tr. 600. Tim Morissette testified he discussed the policy with unit employees sometime after the July plant shutdown, Tr. 601. According to his wife, Amy Morissette, the critical parts of the document were not posted until September, so he could not have discussed the suspension/termination policy with unit employees. Like Jewell, Morissette did not testify that he saw the suspension/termination policy on the bulletin board, which is another reason I conclude it was never posted.

I discredit the testimony of Amy Morissette, Respondent's environmental health and safety coordinator to the contrary. Morissette testified that in July 2009, Ginger Noyes, then Respondent's human resources manager, posted the procedure for corrective action but not the work instructions, which contains the new discipline and discharge policy. Morissette testified that she noticed in September that the work instructions were not posted and emailed Noyes to post them as well. Morissette then testified that she went back to the bulletin board several days later and saw that the entire policy minus the decision tree had been posted. There is no corroboration for the testimony that anything other than three pages were ever posted and since supervisor Jewell only saw three pages, I find that the Procedure for Corrective Action was the only document ever posted on the bulletin board.

I would also note that Respondent's contention that it provided adequate notice of the change in disciplinary policy to the Union is inconsistent with the essence of Article 20 of the collective bargaining agreement. That Article provides that "any notice communication shall be conclusively deemed for all purposes hereunder to be effective given if sent by certified or registered mail, postage prepaid, addressed to the Union to: United Steelworkers, 100 Medway Suite, #403 Milford, MA 01757-2923 and in the case of the Employer to: Kennametal Inc., 378 Main Street, Lydonville, VT 05851.<sup>6</sup> Moreover, even if unit members were aware of the new disciplinary policy, their knowledge is not imputable to the Union, see Brimar Corp., 334 NLRB 1035 n. 1 (2001).

Finally, Morissette's testified at Tr. 414 that so far as Respondent was concerned, the new enhanced disciplinary policy was already in effect when she went to look at the bulletin board in September 2009. If this were so, the corrective action policy was a "fait accompli" by the time Respondent let the Union know of the new policy, for which there can be no waiver of the Union's bargaining rights, Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital, 336 NLRB 1021, 1023-23 (2001).<sup>7</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Respondent suggests that it provided adequate notice pursuant to Article 19, which states that "shop rules" established by the employer will be posted on the bulletin boards forty-eight hours before becoming effective. While the term "shop rules" is not defined in the collective bargaining agreement, I conclude it does not include a policy which does not govern employee conduct, but which rather imposes new draconian consequences for employee conduct. Moreover, Article 19 appears to contemplate posting of "shop rules" on a number of different bulletin boards. There is no evidence that the Procedure and Work Instructions regarding safety violations was posted on any bulletin board other than one near the human resources office. There is at least one other bulletin board, which is provided to the Union pursuant to Article 18 of the collective bargaining agreement, G.C. Exh. 4 p.29; Tr. 397. Thus, Respondent cannot rely on Article 19 even if it did post the material portions of the procedure and work instructions.

<sup>7</sup> Respondent's exhibit 22 contains an email exchange between Morissette and Ginger Noyes, who was Respondent's human resource manager until December 31, 2009. In that exchange Morissette advises that an employee, Robert Gordon, should be disciplined according to the Corrective Action Policy but must be disciplined under the previous safety discipline policy due to the fact that Respondent had not posted the entire policy. First of all, from these emails it is clear that the corrective action policy, i.e., the first three pages of G.C. Exh. 32 had not been posted prior to September 2009. Moreover, Noyes' response is that she will post the Procedure for Corrective Action for Safety Violations. Her response does not mention the work instructions which contain the requirements for a three-day suspension for a first time serious violation and termination for a second serious violation within 24 months. I find the work instructions were not posted and in force at Lydonville until sometime after July 2010. I discredit

Contents of the Procedure for Corrective Action

By way of background, the procedure emphasizes Respondent's commitment to safety. As to scope, the document states it applies to all employees working in any Kennametal facility worldwide, but that "with the approval of the EHS Steering Committee or its designee, the scope of this procedure may vary from facility to facility, based on applicable labor laws."

As to responsibility, the procedure states that the highest ranking employee at any site is responsible for environmental, health and safety compliance and that the facility management is responsible for ensuring all employees are in total compliance with all safety procedures/standards/norms. The burden placed on management at each facility is very similar to the stated purpose of the MBS, which Respondent implemented at Lydonville in February 2010.

The procedure document goes on to state that facility management and human resource representatives will assist the facility management in ensuring that appropriate and consistent, progressive corrective action is taken against every employee who violates applicable safety procedure/standards/norms.

The document distinguishes between serious violations and other violations. This is similar to the distinctions made in Section 17 of the Federal Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSH Act), 29 U.S.C. section 666.<sup>8</sup> Respondent's Procedure defines a serious violation as one that is likely to result in a severe disabling injury such as amputation, spinal injury, broken finger or limb, unconsciousness or death. It then gives examples, "which warrant corrective action" including two relevant to the disciplines at issue in this case, "bypassing safety devices or machine guards," and "improper use of equipment or using inappropriate equipment for the task which is likely to result in a significant injury."

The procedure defines other violations as those that are not likely to result in a severe disabling injury such as an amputation... One of the examples given is "failure to use required personal protective equipment, such as gloves..." and improper use of equipment or using wrong equipment for the task."

The document mandates that, in the discretion of facility management, for a first time serious violation, an employee is to be suspended for three days and for a second serious violation, the employee is to be terminated. The implementation of the new discipline policy for safety violations was also a significant departure from Respondent's long-standing progressive discipline policy, Tr. 529. This was a material change in Respondent's past practice the testimony of Rich Brighenti to the contrary at Tr. 652. None of the disciplinary actions taken prior to the termination of Ken Wilkins appear to follow the discipline policy set forth in the work instructions. The Accident Investigation Policy referred to by Noyes may be a different document.

<sup>8</sup> Section 17 of the OSH Act provides that, "a serious violation shall be deemed to exist in a place of employment if there is a substantial probability that death or serious physical harm could result from a condition which exists, or from one or more practices, means, methods, operations, or processes which have been adopted or are in use, in such place of employment unless the employer did not, and could not with the exercise of reasonable diligence, know of the presence of the violation."

5 regarding a mandatory subject of bargaining, which Respondent was not privileged to change unilaterally, Toledo Blade Co., 343 NLRB 385, 387 (2004).

10 An employer's practices, even if not required by a collective bargaining agreement, which are regular and long-standing, rather than a random or intermittent, become terms and conditions of unit employees' employment, which cannot be altered without offering their collective bargaining representative notice and an opportunity to bargain over the proposed change, Granite City Steel Co., 167 NLRB 310, 315 (1967); Queen Mary Restaurants Corp. v. NLRB, 560 NLRB 403, 408 (9th Cir. 1977); Exxon Shipping Co., 291 NLRB 489, 493 (1988); B & D Plastics, 302 NLRB 245n. 2 (1991); DMI Distribution of Delaware, 334 NLRB 409, 411 (2001). A practice need not be universal to constitute a term or condition of employment, as long as it is regular and long-standing, Brotherhood of Locomotive Fireman and Enginemen, 168 NLRB 677, 679-80 (1967). Respondent's unilateral abandonment of the past practice of progressive discipline for safety violations violated Section 8(a)(5) and (1).

20 I also note that Article 6 of the collective bargaining agreement in force, G.C. Exh. 4, provides that the employer has the right to discharge, suspend or otherwise discipline employees, but that no such action shall be taken without just cause. Respondent's Procedure for Corrective Action, as implemented at Lydonville, converted virtually any significant safety violation or injury into just cause for discipline or discharge. In so doing, it materially modified the parties' contract and was done so without providing the Union with notice of this change and an opportunity to bargain about it.

The Management Based Safety Program

30 Lydonville Plant Manager Richard Brighenti and EHS Coordinator Amy Morissette attended training on the MBS Program at Respondent's headquarters in Latrobe, Pennsylvania, in December 2009.

35 Respondent's Management Based Safety Program was presented to unit employees at Lydonville via a power point presentation on February 2, 2010. The next day, the Union requested that Respondent bargain with it over implementation of the program. Respondent refused, asserting that MBS was not a mandatory subject of bargaining. The Union then filed a grievance. Respondent reasserted this position in a meeting attended by USWA staff representative Carl Turner on March 19, 2010.

40 In July 2010, as part of the MBS, Respondent installed laminated white boards in every production area of the plant. Next to these boards were laminated check lists for each production operation. There are about 40-50 check lists in the Lydonville facility. The Union was not consulted and was not given the opportunity to have an input regarding the content of the check lists.

50 Each employee was required beginning in July to review the check list pertaining to his work each day and then initial each item on the white board corresponding to a requirement on the safety check list. If the employee initialed the item in green it signified that the employee agreed with the statement on the check list. The employee was to initial in red if he or she disagreed with any statement and was to complete an EHS (environmental, health and safety) alert.

The objective requirements of the safety check lists were not new. Thus, if an employee was, for example, required to wear hearing protection after MBS, that was also the case prior to the implementation of MBS. Similarly, an employee's duty to comply with Respondent's jewelry policy did not change with the implementation of MBS.

10

If the operator disagrees with the statement on the check list, they are required to initial the laminated white board in red and fill out an EHS alert. Then the operator's supervisor is supposed to determine what if anything needs to be done to make the operation safe.

15

For example, G.C. Exh. 8 is a safety check list for hand chamfer grinders.<sup>9</sup> Among the approximately 20 items that the operator must attest to are:

20

That he or she has been properly trained to operate the machine safely;<sup>10</sup>
That he or she checked the grinding wheel and determined that it is in good condition and free from defects.

The installation of the white boards and the initialing procedure was implemented unilaterally by Respondent. John Eastman, the Chair of the Union Grievance Committee and member of the Employer-Union Safety Committee, refused to initial the white boards on the grounds that Respondent was shifting the blame for any accident to the machine operator. Eastman put a check or his clock number on the white board instead of his initials until Respondent threatened to discipline him.

30

Changes in the way accidents are investigated since the implementation of MBS

35

Prior to the implementation of MBS, the Union Safety Committee was actively involved in investigating accidents at the Lydonville plant. This included participation in the Accident Report. An example of the report is in this record as G.C. Exhibit 17. Employer and Union Safety Committee members worked jointly in addressing issues concerning the accident. Among these were whether or not the injured employee was properly instructed and whether he or she was performing the operation consistent with those instructions. If the task was not being done in accordance with the operator's instructions, the committee members addressed the issue of whether the employer and/or the injured employee could have prevented the accident.

Upon implementation of MBS, the Union and its Safety Committee played no role in investigating accidents at the plant. This was done unilaterally by Respondent. A change in an employer's investigatory method, which as in this case, substantially alters the mode of investigation and character of evidence on which an employee's continued job security might hinge, is a bargainable change in the terms and conditions of his or her employment. By unilaterally cutting the Union out of the investigation of accidents in situations in which the <sup>9</sup> The dictionary definition of chamfer is a flat surface made by cutting off the edge or corner of something. I assume the hand chamfer is the equipment by which this is accomplished.

<sup>10</sup> The discipline imposed on Ken Wilkins establishes the potential impact of initialing off on this item. Eric Huttenlocker's conclusion that Wilkins had been adequately trained and documents indicating that he had been adequately trained were relied upon by Respondent in deciding to terminate Wilkins, Tr. 632.

5 investigation could lead to serious disciplinary consequences to the injured employee, Respondent violated Section 8(a)(5) and (1), Midcenter, Mid-South Hospital, 221 NLRB 670, 675 (1975).

10 The Union filed a grievance regarding its exclusion from accident investigations on January 14, 2011. The grievance alleged that Respondent is violating Section 16.07 of the collective bargaining agreement, which requires an investigation of by a union member of the joint safety committee and an employer representative.

Discipline Imposed Before and After the Implementation of MBS

On August 24, 2010, Doug Noyes, a former Union President, was drilling a hole in a piece of metal, when the metal stuck on the drill bit and spiraled up cutting Noyes' left hand.
Noyes was not wearing protective gloves while performing this operation, although the use of such gloves is not required by Respondent, but merely recommended. Noyes received 5 stitches 20 in his left hand and was placed on restrictive duty, i.e., painting instead of fabricating metal.

Respondent suspended Noyes for one day on September 2, 2010. The General Counsel alleges that Noyes' suspension is part of or at least related to the implementation of MBS.
Respondent contends the suspension has nothing to do with MBS. I find the Respondent's 25 escalation of discipline was part and parcel of the MBS and thus its enhanced disciplinary policy was implemented in violation of Section 8(a)(5) and (1).<sup>11</sup>

What this record clearly demonstrates is that Respondent escalated its disciplinary punishments for safety violations and accidents at virtually the same time that it introduced MBS 30 at Lydonville. Between July 2003 and February 12, 2010, Respondent took very few disciplinary actions for safety violations. Moreover, it had never imposed more than an oral warning for a safety violation or accident, G.C. Exh. 39.<sup>12</sup>

On February 12, 2010, Respondent suspended David Jenotte for one day for failing to 35 follow Respondent's lockout/tagout policy. A one-day suspension is not consistent with the Procedure for Corrective Action/ Work Instructions. A lockout/tagout is classified as a serious violation for which at least a 3-day suspension would be imposed. Thus, in February 2010, although while Respondent had escalated in its disciplinary policy shortly after the implementation of MBS, it had not implemented the Correction Action/Work Instructions as 40 policy at Lydonville.<sup>13</sup>

<sup>11</sup> I would note that the one-day suspension appears inconsistent with the Procedure for Corrective Action. Failure to use required personal protective equipment such as gloves, is classified as an "other" violation for which a suspension was not warranted under the work instructions. Moreover, Noyes did not fail to use required personal protective equipment; gloves were merely recommended for the operation in which Noyes cut his hand.

<sup>12</sup> In April 2007, Respondent initially proposed issuing a first written warning to employee David Jenotte for a lock out/tag out violation, but on its own accord, without any apparent intervention of the Union, reduced Jenotte's discipline to an oral warning, G.C. Exh. 39, page 10.

<sup>13</sup> Amy Morissette testified about the suspension of Jenotte at Tr. 425-26. I discredit that testimony.
First of all, I find that Morissette had no first-hand knowledge of the process by which Jenotte was suspended for one day; her testimony in this regard is pure hearsay. Moreover, as stated before, a one-day suspension for failing to lockout/tagout is inconsistent with the work instructions.

On February 12, Respondent also issued an unprecedented second written warning to employee Chad Tibbetts for failing to lock out a belt sander. This was reduced to a first written warning apparently because there was no notice regarding lock out/tag out on the machine. I infer from its timing that the escalation to a written warning 2 was associated with the increased pressure placed on management by the implementation of MBS and the involvement of Eric Huttenlocker in the management of labor relations at the Lydonville facility beginning in December 2009.

10

On April 12, 2010, Respondent initially issued a written warning 2 to employee David Brousseau for a safety violation. This was reduced to a written warning 1 and then rescinded pursuant to a grievance settlement. On April 19, Respondent issued a written warning 2 to first shift production supervisor Sean Jewell. Jewell went into a power supply cabinet without the proper protective equipment, exposing him to the hazard of being burned. Since this would appear to serious violation, Jewell's discipline appears inconsistent with the work instructions for corrective actions. This is additional evidence that the disciplinary policy utilized to suspend Noyes and terminate Kenneth Wilkins had not been fully implemented as of April 2010.<sup>14</sup>

The next safety discipline was the suspension given to Noyes. I infer that this ratcheting up on the discipline scheme was also related to MBS since it followed closely the installation of the white boards and Respondent's August 24, 2010 memo insisting the employees initial the white boards. It was also the result of the resignation of Taryn Blair as human resources director at Lydonville and the assumption of her day to day responsibilities by Eric Huttenlocker.<sup>15</sup> Indeed, I find that Huttenlocker implemented the new disciplinary policy without providing notice to the Union between July and early September.

35

On October 27, 2010, employee Ken Wilkins received several cuts on his hand when he reached into a grinder to retrieve a jammed part. The feeder block of the grinder pushed Wilkins' hand into the moving grinding wheel. Respondent investigated this accident without input from any union members of the safety committee. Respondent determined that Wilkins was at fault because he did not wait for the grinding wheel to stop and did not insure that the feeder block switch was in the automatic position. Wilkins was off of work for several weeks as a result of his accident.

In December Eric Huttenlocker made the decision to terminate Wilkins' employment. Respondent presented Wilkins with a termination letter on January 11, 2011. In January 2011 an inspector of the Vermont State OSHA plan conducted an inspection related to the Wilkins <sup>14</sup> The new disciplinary policy applies to management employees as well as bargaining unit employees, Tr. 434. Although failure to use protective equipment may often or usually be an other violation, it would appear to be a serious violation when the likely result of an accident if it would to occur would be burns. Under the OSH Act, for example, it is the likelihood of serious physical harm or death arising from the violative condition if an accident occurs, rather than the likelihood of the accident occurring, which is considered in determining whether a violation is serious. See, Dravo Corp., 7 BNA OSHC 2095, 2101 (No. 16317, 1980), pet. for review denied, 639 F.2d 772 (3d Cir. 1980). An event that is not unexpected and thus likely to occur is not an accident.

5 accident. He has informed Respondent that it is likely to be issued a citation because the guard on Wilkins' machine could be opened without automatically stopping the grinding wheel. The VOSHA inspector also recommended that the labeling of the switch on Wilkins' machine be replaced or enhanced to more clearly indicate whether or not it was in the automatic position.<sup>16</sup>

10 Union Information Requests: (G.C. Exh. 1(v), Exhibits A-D; G.C. Exh. 20, reverse side)

15 Respondent and the Union signed a Memorandum of Agreement regarding the Shipping Room at Lydonville in March 2002. That MOU provides that if, in any continuous 90 day period, the cumulative hours of employees temporarily transferred to work in the Shipping Room is equal or greater than 40 hours each week, a regular full-time position will be created. On April 5, 2010, the Union requested that Respondent provide it with a list of names of employees transferred to the Shipping Department during the prior 3 months and the number of hours each of them worked in the Shipping Department during this period. It asked for the information by April 12. Respondent provided a partial list in April but did not give the Union a complete list until August 20.

25 On April 21, 2010, Respondent posted a notice informing employees that effective June 1, 2010, all employees would be required to wear the highest level of slip resistant shoes. The mandated shoes had a particular grid pattern on the sole and are available through a supplier named Shoes for Crews. The notice instructed employees with a medical condition that would not allow them to wear such shoes to discuss their problem with Taryn Blair, then Respondent's human resource manager.

30 On May 26, 2010, the Union requested proof and/or documentation as to the reasons that the tread design Respondent was proposing to require on safety shoes was superior to other slip resistant shoes approved by Federal OSHA and Vermont's OSH agency. The Union also requested a list of employees who had a deviation from Respondent's proposed shoe policy. The Union requested that this information be provided by June 3. In November 2010 Respondent provided Union with a list of employees who were exempt from its shoe policy. It did not give 35 the Union the name of an employee who was allowed to wear different shoes for medical reasons, citing the privacy rules of the HIPAA (Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act) statute. It has not provided the Union any documents regarding the superiority of the safety shoes it requires.

40 On June 2, 2010, the Union requested that Respondent provide it a copy of documented ergonomic restrictions for the hand chamfer job, by June 7. An ergonomic study was performed at Lydonville in March 2005. The physical therapist performing the study advised Respondent in September 2010, that on the basis of his 2005 evaluation, he believed limiting an employee to 4 hours a day on the hand chamfer would alleviate the risk of ergonomic injury (e.g., carpal 45 tunnel syndrome). Respondent did not provide the Union with a copy of either the 2005 analysis or the September 2010 note from the physical therapist.

On July 16, 2010, USWA Staff Representative Carl Turner requested Respondent provide him any information on what he understood was a new safety procedure at the plant and <sup>16</sup> OSHA citations may be issued for a condition completely unrelated to an accident that leads to the inspection of a workplace.

5 to bargain with the Union over its implementation. This referred to Respondent's posting of the white boards and the requirement that employees initial these boards. Respondent has not provided this information.

Respondent violated Section 8(a)(5) and (1) by implementing new policies regarding discipline and discharge for safety violations

15 Board law is clear that disciplinary policies and procedures constitute mandatory subjects of bargaining. Further, work rules that could be grounds for discipline are mandatory subjects of bargaining, Southern Mail, Inc., 345 NLRB 644, 646 (2005); Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. of Fayetteville, Inc., 330 NLRB 900, 904 (2000), enfd. In relevant part 24 Fed. Appx. 104 (4th Cir. 2001); Frontier Hotel & Casino, 309 NLRB 761, 766 (1992), enfd. 71 F. 3d 1434 (9th Cir. 1995).

20 It is clear that the Union requested to bargain over the MBS and that Respondent refused. At least that part of the MBS requiring employees to initial the white boards is a mandatory subject of bargaining in that employees are subject to discipline if they refuse to do so. Thus, Respondent violated Section 8(a)(5) with regard to the MBS at least with respect to this requirement of the program.

30 Secondly, I find that Respondent violated Section 8(a)(5) and (1) with regard to the disciplinary policy reflected in the work instructions for corrective action regardless of whether it is deemed to be part of MBS or a totally separate policy. However, in the context of this case to consider the disciplinary policy for safety violations as a totally separate and distinct matter from MBS would elevate form over substance. MBS and the discipline policy are part of the same corporate initiative to improve Respondent's safety record, particularly at Lydonville.

35 Regardless of what was posted on Respondent's bulletin board, it is clear that the safety policy was not implemented until July 2010.<sup>17</sup> Moreover, even assuming that the policy was in effect earlier, Respondent's disciplinary policy for safety violations changed from virtual nonenforcement to strict enforcement after July 2010. I infer that the implementation or stricter enforcement of this safety policy is related to other initiatives that clearly were part of MBS, the erection of the white boards and the imposition of the requirement that employees certify the safety of their work environment.

Thus, the change in the safety policy, made without providing the Union an opportunity to bargain, is a violation of Section 8(a)(5), whether or not it is technically part of MBS,

<sup>17</sup> At pages 8-9 of its brief, Respondent suggests that employees were disciplined pursuant to the Corrective Action policy beginning in February 2010. It suggests that none were suspended because their violations "did not result in any actual harm." An accident or injury is irrelevant to whether a safety violation is classified as serious under Respondent's Procedure for Corrective Action for Safety Violations. Respondent's failure to discipline any employee with more than a warning, other than a one-day suspension for Jenotte, until August 2010, demonstrates that the policy had not yet been implemented. Respondent's claim at page 9 of its brief, that Noyes' accident was the first serious safety violation following the alleged adoption of the Corrective Action Policy in 2009, is simply inaccurate.

5 Southern Mail, supra. As stated, I find Respondent did not provide adequate notice of the policy itself until January 2011 and that for this reason, its Section 10(b) contention is without merit.

The Union did not waive its bargaining rights over MBS or Respondent's new disciplinary policy

10 To be effective, a waiver of statutory bargaining rights must be clear and unmistakable, California Offset Printers, 349 NLRB 732, 733 (2007). Waiver can occur in any of three ways, by express provision in a collective bargaining agreement, by the conduct of the parties, (including past practices, bargaining history and action or inaction) or by a combination of the two. Nothing in this record establishes a waiver of the Union's bargaining rights with regard to 15 those parts of the MBS effecting the terms and conditions of unit members' employment or the discipline policy implemented by Respondent in 2010 for safety violations.

The mere fact that a union previously acquiesced in an employer's unilateral implementation of safety rules does not give an employer the right to make different changes in 20 plant rules, or other terms and conditions of employment, if those changes are material and significant, Bath Iron Works, 302 NLRB 898, 900 (1991). Moreover, in the instant case, while the Union previously acquiesced in some of Respondent's unilateral changes, it did not acquiesce in others and requested bargaining.

25 The legality of Respondent's disciplinary policy for safety violations was tried by consent and fully and fairly litigated.

Assuming that the complaint allegations do not sufficiently address Respondents' disciplinary policy for safety violations, I conclude that the issue was tried by consent and fully 30 and fairly litigated. It is well established that the Board may find and remedy an unfair labor practice not specifically alleged in the complaint, "if the issue is closely connected to the subject matter of the complaint and has been fully litigated," Pergament United Sales, 296 NLRB 333, 334 (1989), enfd. 920 F.2d 130 2d Cir. 1990; Gallup, Inc., 334 NLRB 336 (2001).

35 The Procedure for Corrective Action and Work Instructions and strict enforcement of the new disciplinary policies are closely connected to the allegation that Respondent violated the Act by unilaterally implementing the MBS in February 2010. First of all, G.C. Exh. 42, a document promulgated to MBS, references counseling and discipline as one of the tools that Respondent 40 intended to utilize in improving its safety record and reducing the cost to it of workplace accidents. Secondly, I infer, in the absence of any contrary evidence, that strict enforcement of the discipline policies reflected in the work instructions are part of the same initiative as is MBS to render Kennametal's workplaces safer.

The Complaint in this matter did not allege that Respondent violated Section 8(a)(5) by 45 implementing new disciplinary policies for safety violations, until the filing of the post-hearing briefs. However, that Respondent was on notice that the disciplinary policies were at issue in this case is established by its motion to amend its Answer to include a Section 10(b) defense to any challenge to the Disciplinary Corrective Action Policy, Tr. 457 and the General Counsel's motion for the Board to remedy the discipline and discharge of employees Noyes and Wilkins.
50 Moreover, Respondent in fact defended against any Section 8(a)(5) challenge to this policy by contending that it had been in force since at least September 2009, that the Union had notice of the policy by the posting of documents on a bulletin board and that the Union had waived its

5 bargaining rights on this policy by remaining silent in the face of such notification. Respondent did not contend that it bargained with the Union regarding the markedly stricter discipline imposed on employees for safety violations beginning in February 2010 and then made even stricter starting with Doug Noyes' injury in August and clearly could not have done so.

10 Failure to Respond to Information Requests; Delay in Responding

Upon request, an employer has the legal duty to furnish its employees' bargaining agent with information relevant and necessary to the performance of its statutory duties. NLRB v. Acme Industrial Co., 385 U.S. 432. (1967). The law deems information about the wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment of unit employees to be presumptively relevant. Timken Roller Bearing Co., 138 NLRB 15 (1962).

An employer's statutory obligation to furnish the union relevant information, on request, absent special circumstances, is not relieved merely because the union may have access to the requested information from other sources, Postal Service, 276 NLRB 1282, 1288 (1985); New York Times Co., 265 NLRB 353 (1982); Kroger Co., 226 NLRB 512 (1976). Thus, the extent to which the Union had access to information regarding the transfer of employees to the shipping room is irrelevant to Respondent's obligation to provide the information requested by the Union on this issue.

Respondent has offered no valid excuse or explanation for its failure to comply with the Union's other information requests: 1) information showing that the slip resistant shoes it proposed to require were superior to other types;<sup>18</sup> 2) information about ergonomic restrictions for the hand chamfer<sup>19</sup> and 3) Carl Turner's request relating to the requirements for initiating the white boards. Thus, Respondent has violated Section 8(a)(5) and (1) in failing to provide this information.<sup>20</sup>

Delay in providing names and hours of employees transferred to the Shipping Room

An employer must respond to an information request in a timely manner. An unreasonable delay in furnishing such information is as much of a violation of Section 8(a)(5) of the Act as a refusal to furnish the information at all, American Signature Inc., 334 NLRB 880, 885 (2001).<sup>21</sup>

<sup>18</sup> Respondent in its brief at page 23 states it had no such information. If so, it was required to so inform the Union, Days Hotel of Southfield, 306 NLRB 949, 954 (1992). There is no evidence that Respondent replied to the Union's May 26, 2010 request, although Amy Morissette testified that she told the Union that OSHA had no such information sometime between April and September 2010, see Tr. 335, 491-2.

<sup>19</sup> Respondent at page 23 also states that the Union was provided the ergonomic study regarding the hand chamfer in 2009, before it made its information request. The preponderance of the record evidence is to the contrary, Tr. 167, 120-21.

<sup>20</sup> I have no basis for determining whether Respondent's claim that it could not identify employees who were exempted from the shoe policy pursuant to HIPAA is legitimate or not and thus conclude that Respondent did not violate the Act in this regard.

<sup>21</sup> This case has also been cited under the name of Amersig Graphics, Inc.

5 The Board recently summarized the standard that it employs in assessing a claim of unreasonable delay: In determining whether an employer has unlawfully delayed responding to an information request, the Board considers the totality of the circumstances surrounding the incident. Indeed, it is well established that the duty to furnish requested information cannot be defined in terms of a per se rule. What is required is a reasonable good 10 faith effort to respond to the request as promptly as circumstances allow. In evaluating the promptness of the response, the Board will consider the complexity and extent of information sought, its availability and the difficulty in retrieving the information, West Penn Power Co., 339 NLRB 585, 587 (2003), enf. in pertinent part 349 F.3d 233 (4th Cir. 2005).

15 Applying this test to instant case, I find that Respondent violated Section 8(a)(5) and (1) in not providing the names and hours of work of employees transferred to shipping room for over 4 months. In American Signature, supra, the Board found a violation where the employer provided the information requested by the Union two and a half to three months after the request.
 In Earthgrains, Co., 349 NLRB 389, 400 (2007), the Board found a violation where the 20 employer responded four months after the request without explaining the delay.

Respondent has offered no explanation as to why it took four months to provide the Union with the information it requested regarding these temporary transfers. Thus, I find a violation with respect to the delay in providing this information.

25 Summary of Conclusions of Law

Respondent Kennametal, Inc., violated Section 8(a)(5) and (1) by:

- 30 1) failing and refusing to bargain with the Union over the implementation of the Management Based Safety Program insofar as it required employees to take such actions as initialing agreement or disagreement with the safety check list on its white boards upon pain of discipline;
- 35 2) Excluding the Union from accident investigations;
- 3) By unilaterally implementing and/or more strictly enforcing its disciplinary policies for safety violations;
- 4) By suspending Doug Noyes and terminating Kenneth Wilkins;
- 40 5) By failing and/or delaying the furnishing to the Union of information it requested that is necessary for and relevant to the Union's duties as collective bargaining representative of Respondent's employees.

Remedy

45 Having found that the Respondent has engaged in certain unfair labor practices, I find that it must be ordered to cease and desist and to take certain affirmative action designed to effectuate the policies of the Act.

50 The Respondent having disciplined Kenneth Wilkins in violation of Section 8(a)(5) of the Act, it must offer Ken Wilkins reinstatement and make Wilkins whole for any loss of earnings and other benefits, computed on a quarterly basis from date of discharge to date of proper offer of reinstatement, less any net interim earnings, as prescribed in F. W. Woolworth Co., 90 NLRB 289 (1950), plus interest as computed in New Horizons for the Retarded, 283 NLRB 1173

5 (1987), compounded daily as prescribed in Kentucky River Medical Center, 356 NLRB No. 8 (2010). It must also make Doug Noyes whole for his one-day suspension in a similar manner.

On these findings of fact and conclusions of law and on the entire record, I issue the following recommended<sup>22</sup>

ORDER

The Respondent, Kennametal, Inc., Lydonville, Vermont, its officers, agents, successors, and assigns, shall

1. Cease and desist from:

(a) Unilaterally altering the wages, hours and/or terms and conditions of employment of bargaining unit employees, by such means as, but not limited to, implementing a new discipline policy for safety violations or more strictly enforcing its discipline policy for safety violations;

20

(b) Unilaterally implementing its Management Based Safety Program in a manner that excludes union participation in accident investigations and/or results in the imposition of discipline for an employee's failure to comply with requirements unilaterally imposed pursuant to the Management Based Safety Program;

25

(c) Failing or delaying the providing of information to the Union that is necessary and relevant to its role as the exclusive collective-bargaining representative of production and maintenance employees at its Lydonville, Vermont facility.

40

(c) Within 14 days from the date of the Board's Order, remove from its files any reference to Kenneth Wilkins' unlawful discharge, or other discipline imposed related to his October 27, 2010 accident, and Doug Noyes' unlawful suspension and within 3 days thereafter notify both of them in writing that this has been done and that these adverse personnel actions will not be used against them in any way.

45

<sup>22</sup> If no exceptions are filed as provided by Sec. 102.46 of the Board's Rules and Regulations, the findings, conclusions, and recommended Order shall, as provided in Sec. 102.48 of the Rules, be adopted by the Board and all objections to them shall be deemed waived for all purposes.

(d) At the request of the Union, rescind any unilateral changes that affect the wages, hours and/or terms and conditions employment of unit employees. However, nothing in this Order shall be construed as requiring or authorizing the Respondent to rescind any benefit previously granted unless requested to do so by the Union.

10

(e) Furnish the Union with the information that it requested on April 5, May 26, June 2 and July 16, 2010, if not previously provided.

15

(f) Reinstigate an accident investigation process that provides the Union the opportunity to meaningfully participate in such investigations, consistent with the parties 2005-2010 collective bargaining agreement.

25

(h) Within 14 days after service by the Region, post at its Lydonville, Vermont facility copies of the attached notice marked "Appendix."<sup>23</sup> Copies of the notice, on forms provided by the Regional Director for Region 1, after being signed by the Respondent's authorized representative, shall be posted by the Respondent and maintained for 60 consecutive days in conspicuous places including all places where notices to employees are customarily posted. In addition to physical posting of paper notices, the notices shall be distributed electronically, such as by email, posting on an intranet or an internet site, and/or other electronic means, if the Respondent customarily communicates with its employees by such means. Reasonable steps shall be taken by the Respondent to ensure that the notices are not altered, defaced, or covered by any other material. In the event that, during the pendency of these proceedings, the Respondent has gone out of business or closed the facility involved in these proceedings, the Respondent shall duplicate and mail, at its own expense, a copy of the notice to all current employees and former employees employed by the Respondent at any time since February 2, 2010.

30

(k) Within 21 days after service by the Region, file with the Regional Director a sworn certification of a responsible official on a form provided by the Region attesting to the steps that the Respondent has taken to comply.
